A SOCIAL HISTORY OF ALBUQUERQUE

1880 - 1885

By: Bernice Ann Rebord

INTRODUCTION:

This is a history of Albuquerque, New Mexico, written by Ms. Rebord in her thesis for partial fulfillment of requirements for her masters degree and records the facts and the people that built Albuquerque's society in the early days after the appearance of the railroad. It is an important work for historians, researchers, and genealogists, as it contains hundreds of names taken from the newspapers of the day, plus research of other records and some interviews of persons connected to that history. The biggest thing it lacked was an index for ease of use and rapid identification of people that lived in the city at that time.

The Genealogy Club of Albuquerque has undertaken a project of indexing many books and records that have been acquired at the Albuquerque Public Library, but did not contain an index. Thus this index was prepared in an effort to help researchers in their work.

The work started with a listing on the first unnumbered page of acknowledgements thanking the people that had helped the author in preparing and publishing this work. Those acknowledgements are also set forth in this index. There are also several pages numbered with Roman numerals at the beginning that contain names, and those are also included.

The researcher is also referred to the list of publications at the end of this index describing the various years of newspapers that have been indexed by the Genealogy Club of Albuquerque as many of these names are also found in the daily paper of the 1880's and 1890's.
